

Hi there, my name is Alex J. Wendpap, experienced in the fields of interface design (UX/UI), information design and business analytics. Detail oriented, brazilian born, german based, with a subtle canadian touch and a healthy level of perfectionism.

With 15 years of experience and the major focus in interface design as a whole, my skills involve also design research, user journeys and user experience alignment to business KPIs, innovation workshops and design team management.

With a fast forward approach, I aim to realise ideas as quick as possible, enabling business discussions over concrete results, catalysing understanding and maximising business value and leveraging all options the design profession has to offer.

About me

Information and whereabouts

FULL NAME Alex Jonatan Wendpap
COUNTRY Originally from Brazil, currently living in Berlin
TITLE Bachelor in Graphic Design / Industrial Design

NATIONALITY Brazilian
MARITAL STATUS Married, 2 kids and a pair of good old boots
CURRENT VISA STATUS German permanent residency (Niederlassungserlaubnis)

2. From 01.2008 until 08.2011 I lived and worked in Vancouver, Canada. There I improved my english and UX/UI design skills, learned a bit of snowboarding, to be more polite and to complain about rain.

3. After Canada I decided to embrace a new challenge: improve my german skills and eventually settle in Berlin. Here, besides learning german, I've reached a reasonably deep level of knowledge regarding UX/UI design, innovation workshops and design team management.

1. I was born in very south of Brazil (way down there, where it gets cold again - seriously). I lived there until end of 2007. At the age of 18 got my first (hands-on) contact with design work (CAD design). I studied graphic design at the UFSM, and gathered experience in graphic, web and motion design for the first 4 years after university.

Quality Management Dashboard (1/2)

The air is thin at the top of Germany's automotive market. A small detail decides over ranking and leadership, specially when the client decided not only to trust in perfect products but moreover in perfection. Each and every car since then has been equipped with sensors, providing data on conditions and states from a variety of components.

My contribution on this project was as main designer, participating in several workshops, sketching, revising and presenting a solution that bundles all sensor information in a powerful quality management dashboard.

A finalized tool concept with an accurate brand-conform look was successfully delivered. Moreover, quality assurance and further design assets development where made with a total of 3 designers involved, enabling 2 additional phases for the project.

Enterprise Forecasting Tool (1/3)

Measure, define and predict what is financially possible in a world-wide enterprise is an interesting challenge. The financial service department from a leading automotive company decided to translate and optimize its different forecasting tools and methods in a single product-solution.

Through design thinking and additional UX-wireframing workshops, my input here was helping to understand the status quo and project goals, simplify and consolidate all technical and users requirements, to finally design a starting concept for a financial forecasting tool.

The major challenges encompassed the understanding of user needs, simplifying the current highly-complex methods and techniques the company already use, and together with the technical requirements, generate an optimal dashboard solution with positive impact to all stakeholders.

Big Data Telematics

Making the most out of the available data is crucial within the progressive competitiveness that reigns the insurance world.

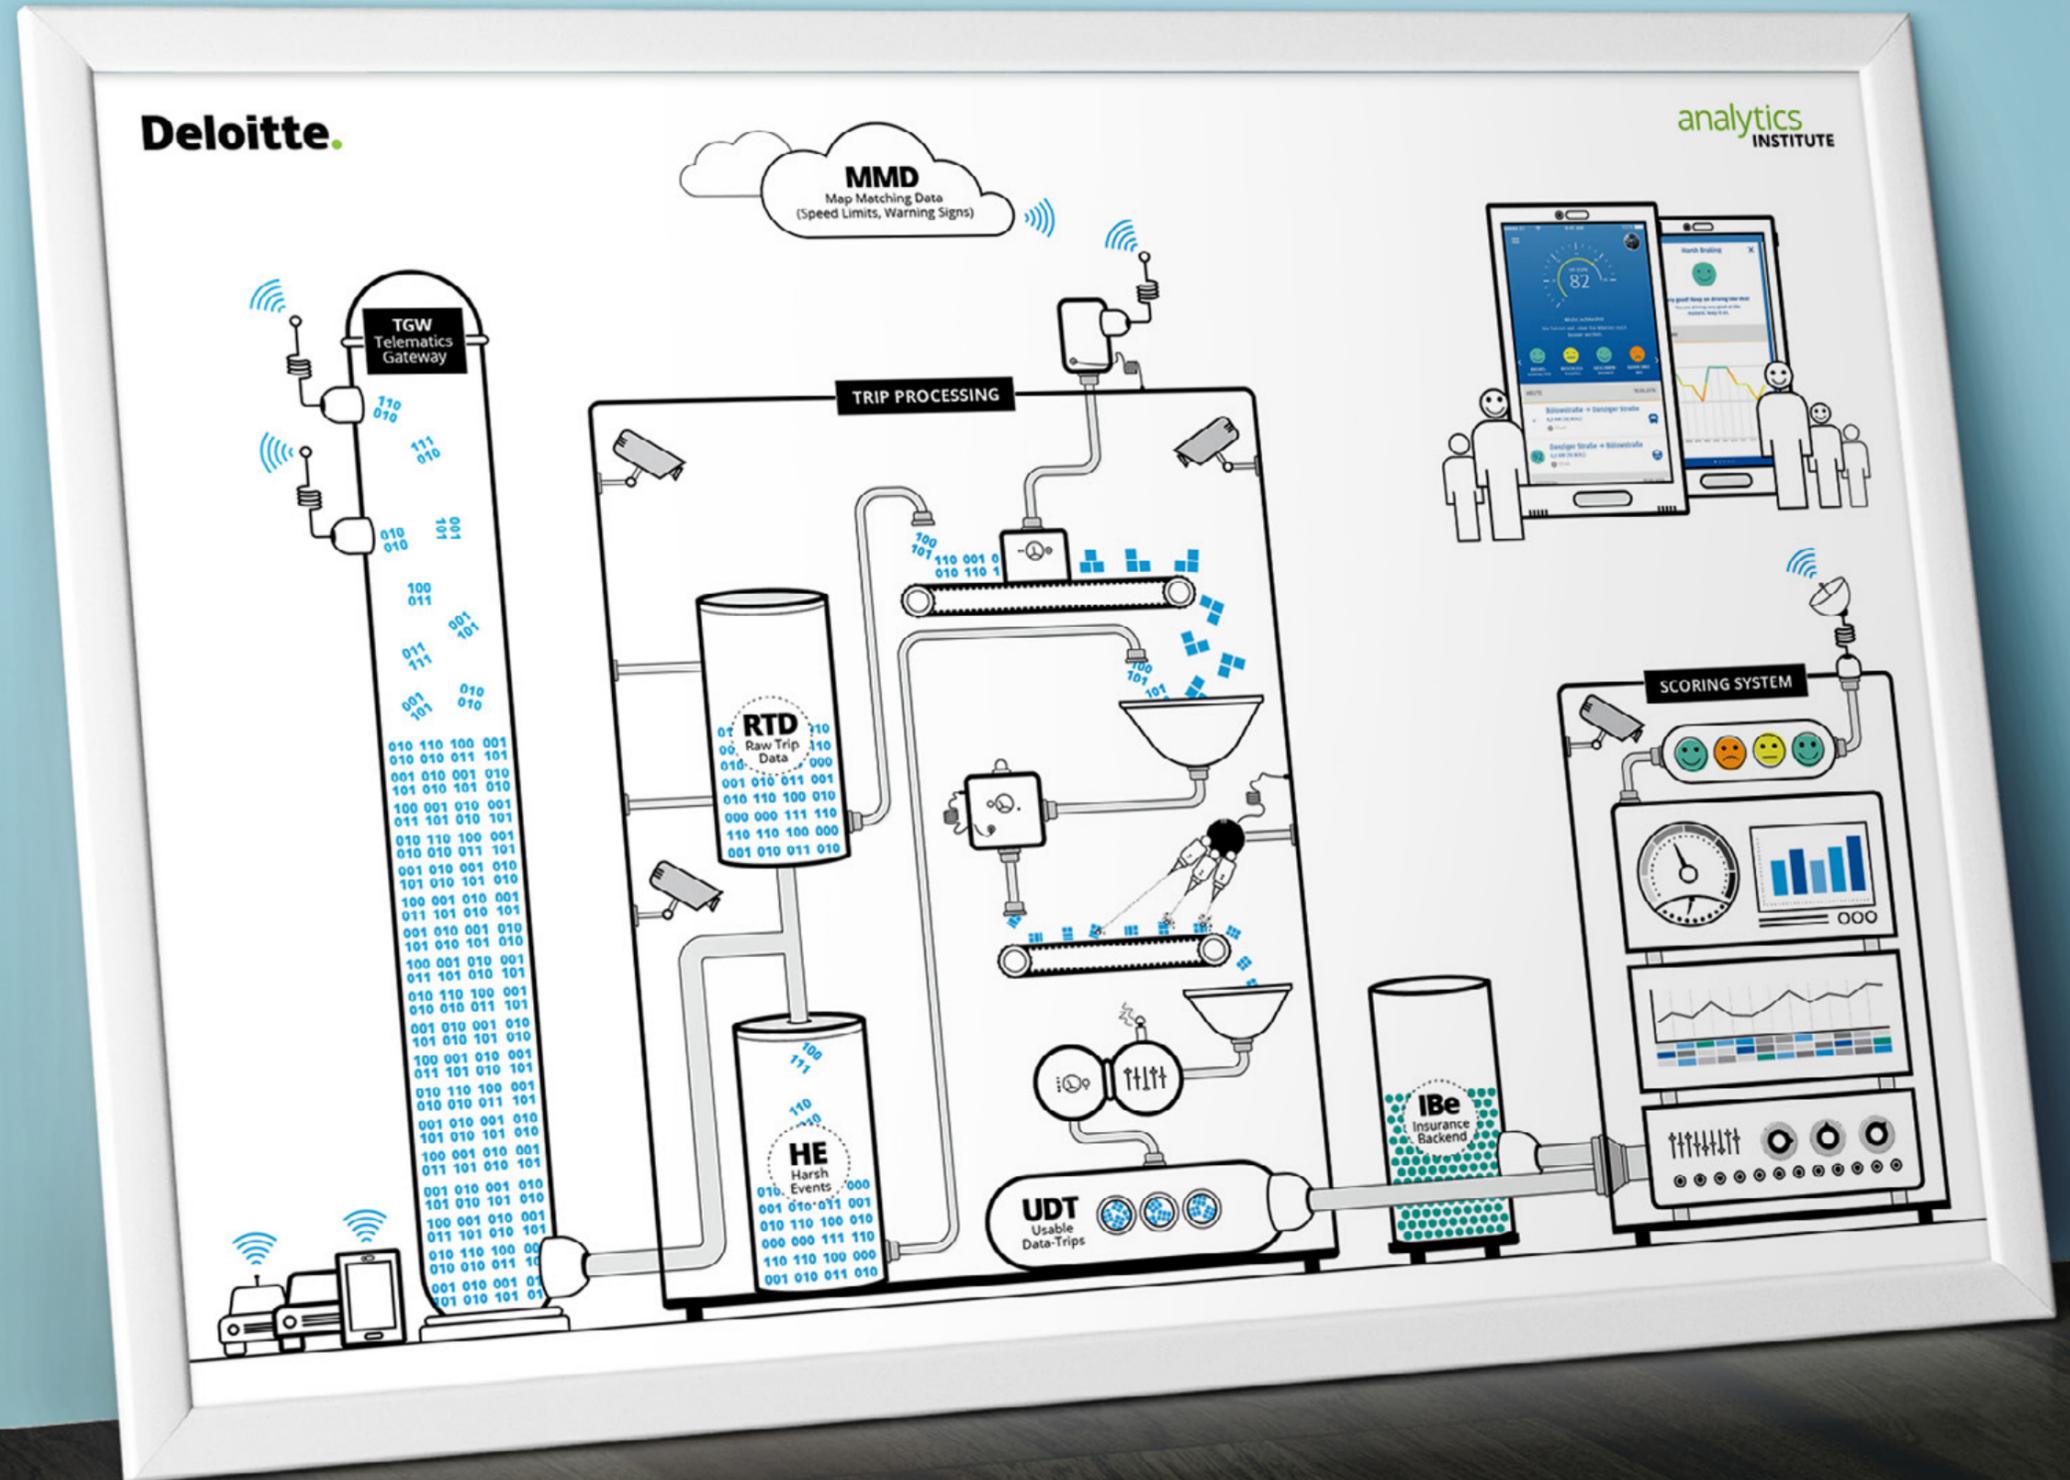

For a major player in the worldwide insurance industry, a solution that allows a fairer option for its product pricings while granting optimal service and client satisfaction was generated.

With a straightforward design approach, my collaboration was on the creation of a detailed infographic that made the whole project journey, its requirements and technical challenges very easy to understand.

Moreover, discussions about problems, solutions and related outcomes with each stakeholder were immensely eased.

LABapp (1/2)

With an astonishing productive first years, Deloitte Analytics Institute felt a clear need to not just organize but also present its innovative showcases in a user-friendly and user-centric approach, bringing workshops and client presentations to a next qualitative level.

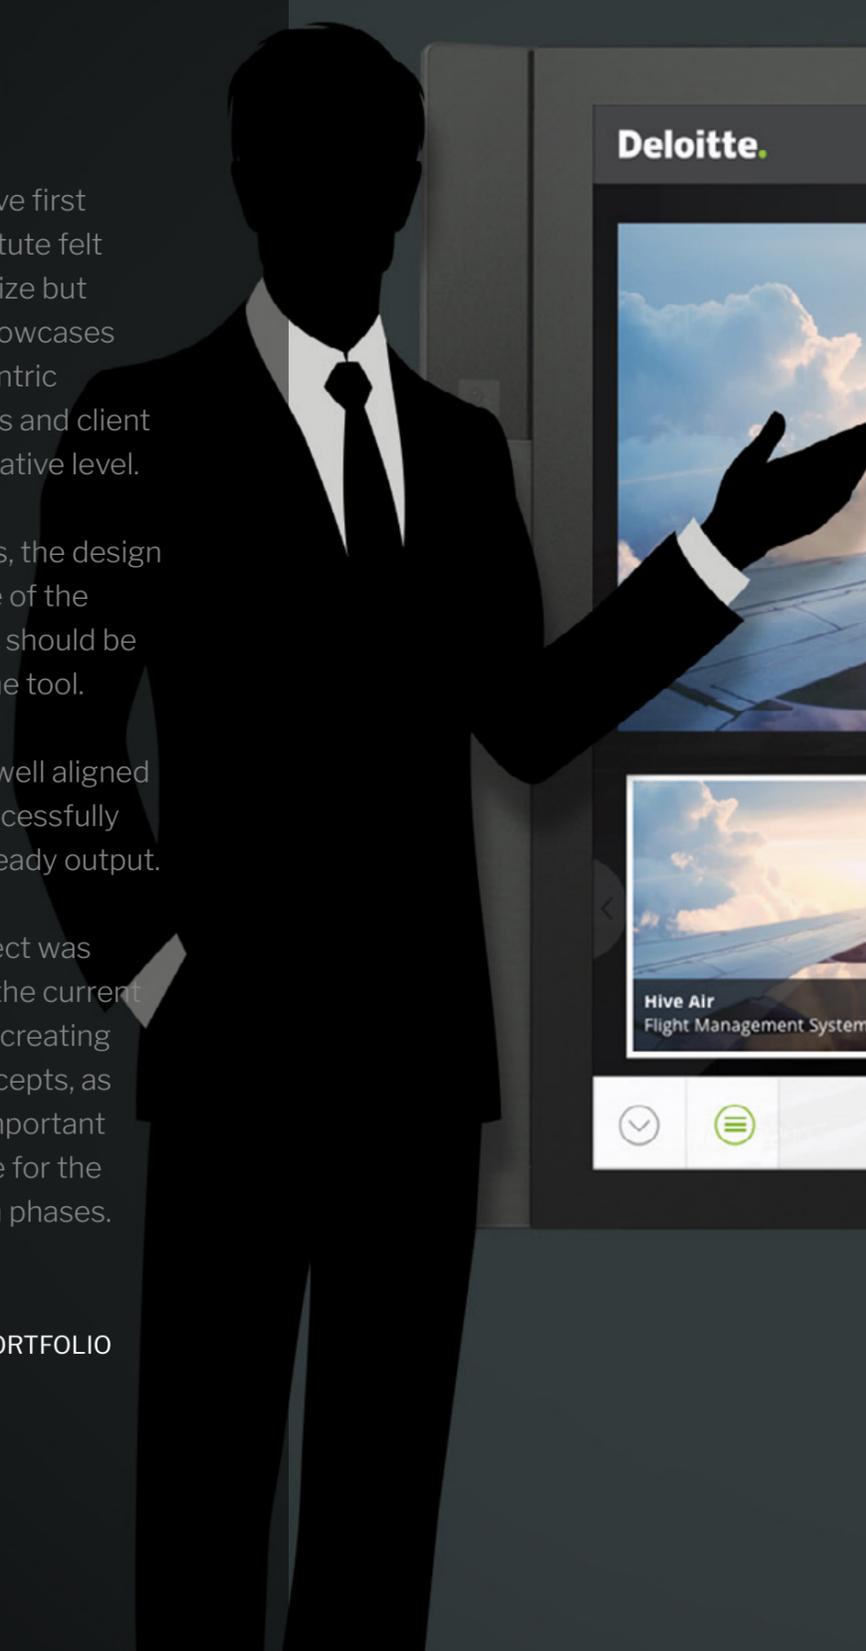

Having led several workshops, the design team already had a solid base of the requirements and issues that should be addressed when designing the tool.

The finalized concepts were well aligned with all requirements and successfully delivered in a development-ready output.

My collaboration on this project was first on redesigning some of the current showcases, and furthermore creating wireframes and finalized concepts, as well as assets for the most important screens, enabling a solid base for the frontend and implementation phases.

RoRAC Online Experience (1/2)

The client was in the process of building up a centralized and globally standardized RoRAC online calculation service tool, as well as a digital pricing and approval experience for all sales stakeholders.

Concept and ideation (Design Thinking approach), stakeholder analysis, review of user needs, user stories, sketches, wireframes, up to finalized screen design samples and first round of feedback with the users where the steps taken for this project.

The provided output were documented workshop materials and wireframe guidance, detailed sketches of the main screens with user requirements, technical requirements and workflow, and finally, finished (Brand-conform) design of the chosen screens built into a working (MVP) prototype.

Side Projects (Hobby) (1/3)

To stay current with hands on capabilities and to know the latest tools, trends and challenges within interface design, a parallel activity also takes place by executing side projects such as icon libraries and products/concepts for front-end development.

1. In this screen a few examples of icon design can be seen. A total of near one thousand icons can be found at an online store named iconfinder, where the best output is up for sale. This is an ongoing project which is handled as an hobby.

2. On the next page you can see Firmattic. A tentative of an UI Bundle, further on planned to be unfolded as a design system product.

3. On the third page from here an online store design called VENDER was made. The idea was to scale the designs into a bootstrap frontend theme/product for e-commerce purposes.

Testimonials

A result of respect, understanding and reliable service, most of our clients aren't with us for a short term. Check out what some of them have to say.

Firmattic is fantastic! It simply saved us so much time and trouble during the user interface design phase. I couldn't recommend more.

Web Agencies and Freelance (Legacy) (1/2)

Here 2 dated items are shown as a past experience examples by working as UI designer at a digital agency in berlin called Publicis Pixelpark.

1. In this screen a few examples of the iOS mobile application for the (yet to be finalized) new airport from Berlin (BER) can be seen. My participation on this project was the conversion of wireframes into brand-conform screen designs, plus quality assurance during the development and pre-launch phase.

2. The next screen shows 2 examples of a project made for Red Bull. The project intention was to build a unified and very consistent UI toolbox, enabling all allowed IT or co-related Red Bull workers to grab interface assets and brand references for internal development. Could be seen as a pioneering form of corporate design system. My collaboration on this project was almost purely UI Design, creating and exporting several different assets, icons and KPIs for further development.

and additional information

Objectives

Act with a design perspective for innovative business ideas, in the prototyping and visualisation phases of new products and solutions in the fields of mobility, fin-tech, education and information technology (IT).

Catalyse understanding, optimise business value and generate a positive and impactful wave through the design “enabling-gears” capabilities.

Areas of interests within design

Team management, innovation and strategy, UX/UI design, product design, design systems and process optimization, business intelligence & design.
